The purpose of the agreement is to develop, in the state of Paraná, large-scale production projects for green hydrogen, which is regarded as one of the main prospects for the energy transition to a carbon-neutral world. Obtained through the electrolysis process, green hydrogen or its derivatives can replace the use of fossil fuels in carbon-intensive industries and can be exported, opening opportunities for Brazil.

"We believe that these partnerships are crucial to accelerating the energy transition and want to play a leading role in de-carbonization solutions for several industries and their supply chains. Futhermore, this action is in line with the renewable energy strategy of the State of Paraná", said Eduardo Sattamini, ENGIE Brasil Energia's Chief Executive and Investor Relations Officer.

The Company reiterates its commitment to keeping its investors and the market at large abreast of developments in connection with this and any other matter relevant to the market.
